ESPHYR SLOBODKINA

The paintings of Esphyr Slobodkina have long been counted among the distinguished contributions to the American Abstract movement. It is not so well-known that Miss Slobodkina, like artists of the past, has been pursuing a number of different directions at the same time. The present exhibition shows various facets of her talent, — everything in fact except her typical work. It is refreshing, in this age of specialization, to encounter an artist who can spread her sense of quality into fields so completely diverse; her taste and character are equally apparent in abstraction, in illustrations for children's books, and in doll-costumes that are among the charming features of this unusual exhibition.
